Noah und die Arche

Noah und seine Frau Naamah waren gute Menschen. Sie hatten drei Söhne: Sem, Ham und Jafet. Gott mochte Sie besonders gerne. Mit den anderen Menschen auf der Erde war Gott gar nicht mehr glücklich. Sie waren nicht gut zueinander und kümmerten sich nicht um die Gebote, die Gott ihnen gegeben hatte. Bei Noah und seiner Familie war das anders. Sie waren gut zu Menschen und zu Tieren. Deswegen hatte Gott einen besonderen Auftrag für sie. Gott wollte einen Neuanfang und die Erde von einer riesigen Wassermasse überspülen lassen. Damit Noah und seine Familie, aber auch die Tiere überleben würden, sollte Noah ein großes Schiff, die Arche, bauen. Zusammen mit seiner Familie fällte er Bäume, trug das Holz zusammen und versiegelte die Arche von außen mit Teer. Und dann versammelte er seine Familie und alle Tiere auf der Arche, immer zwei von jeder Art. Alle Tiere kamen an Bord, die ganz kleinen, wie Schnecken und Frösche und die ganz großen, wie Gnus und Elefanten und alle, die dazwischen waren, wie Pinguine und Schafe. Gerade rechtzeitig waren alle Tiere an Bord der Arche. Da kam ein brausender Wind und ein starker Regen setzte ein. So stark, dass er lange nicht aufhörte und das ganze Land unter Wasser setzte. Und immer wieder sagte seine Frau Naamah: "Gott wird uns helfen! Auch wenn wir das gerade noch nicht sehen können!" Immer wieder schickte Noah Vögel, die mit an Bord der Arche waren, los, um zu gucken, ob es irgendwo einen trockenen Anlegeplatz gab oder ob sie etwas von ihrem Flug zurückbringen würden. Nach einer Woche brachte eine Taube den Zweig eines Olivenbaums mit. Alle freuten sich und Noah rief: "Seht, hier wächst etwas, es ist wieder Land in der Nähe!" Und es dauerte nicht lange, da setzte die Arche auf einem Berg auf. Alle verließen die Arche und alle freuten sich. Gott sagte: "Kommt, diese Erde sollt ihr nun neu bewohnen." Und Gott bereute, dass er alles andere kaputt gemacht hatte und sagte: "Nie wieder soll so etwas passieren. Ich schenke euch diesen Regenbogen, der zwischen den Wolken aufgespannt ist. Das ist das Versprechen, dass Menschen und Tiere nun friedlich zusammenleben werden und ich als ihr Gott bei ihnen bin." Noah, Naamah, ihre Söhne und alle Tiere bewohnten die Erde und waren dankbar und froh, dass Gott sie und alle Menschen im Leben begleitet. Daran musste Noah nun jedes Mal denken, wenn er zum Himmel guckte und einen Regenbogen sah.

Alternative BAUANLEITUNG für die Arche

Die Tiere werden entsprechend der vorherigen Anleitung gebaut und finden dann Platz auf der Arche.
